Big 5 Personality Traits

1. Openness
2. Conscientiousness
3. Extraversion
4. Agreeableness
5. Neuroticism

Openness

Openness to experience

Openness reflects curiosity, creativity and seeking novelty as opposed to routine. Open people appreciate the arts, adventure and unusual ideas and take more risks; may lack focus.

Less OPEN people are fulfilled through perseverance and are pragmatic and data driven. May be considered inflexible.

Openness

Low

- Dislike Change
- Resists new idea
- Not imaginative
- Prefers routine

High

- Very creative
- Tries new things
- Abstract thinker
- Independent

Conscientiousness

High level of thoughtfulness

Conscientious people are dependable, dutiful, self- disciplined, structured and like to have a plan. They tend to work toward a goal in a focused way.

Low CONSCIENTIOUSNESS individuals are flexible and spontaneous, but can come across as sloppy and unreliable.

Conscientiousness

Low

- Impulsive
- Procrastinates
- Careless
- Disorganized

High

- Prepared
- Completed tasks
- Hardworking
- Dependable

Extraversion

Experience positive emotional states

Extroverts seek stimulation and derive energy from others. They are energetic, talkative, sociable and assertive. They may be considered attention-seeking or domineering.

Low levels of EXTRAVERSION are reserved. They seek time alone to recharge and are less dominant in social settings. They may be considered aloof, distant or self-absorbed'

Extraversion

Low

- Quiet
- Withdrawn
- Prefers solitude
- Careful before talking

High

- Outgoing
- Seeks adventure
- Likes center of attention
- Speaks before thinking

Agreeableness

Get along with people

Agreeable individuals value people, cooperation and compassion. They trust and see the best in people, like to help and are good tempered. Highly aggregable people might be considered gullible, naïve or submissive.

Individuals with low agreeableness can be argumentative, untrustworthy, antagonistic, suspicious of others, challenging and competitive.

Agreeableness

Low

- Uncooperative
- Little interest in others
- Suspicious
- Belittles others

High

- Helpful
- Interest in other people
- Trusting
- Assists others

Neuroticism

Negative Affectivity

Neurotic people tend towards stress, worry, anxiety, perhaps anger and even depression. Highly neurotic people are less emotional stable than others. Low neuroticism results in stability and control, but might come across as un-empathetic, uninspiring, un-dynamic or even boring.

High levels of neuroticism can create excitable people.

Neuroticism

Low

- Emotionally stable
- Rarely feels depressed
- Relaxed
- Deals with stress

High

- Stressful
- Gets upset easily
- Experiences mood swings
- Worries about everything

Qualities of Self-Actualized People

- Independent & resourceful
- Loving
- Exude gratitude
- Form their own opinions
- View life as a mission
- Set & achieve goals aligned with personal values
- Altruistic
- Embrace authenticity
- Prioritize personal over external
- Engage in self-reflection
- Experience moments of flow
- Embrace strengths and weaknesses

The Art of Becoming Human

- Accepting our flaws
- Seek purposeful growth
- Recognize the power of positivity
- Adopt passion – relationships, life
- Embrace the journey
